The longer you use Dragon speech recognition, the greater the benefits

Dragon has been helping organisations be more efficient with their document production for many years. Some companies have been Dragon speech recognition users for ten years or more and working with our speech recognition software is as much a part of their everyday life as eating and sleeping. We spoke to one legal professional who has been using Dragon for more than twenty years. We learned a lot about how Dragon speech recognition software has been an asset to his working life.

Mark Robinson is a senior counsel in Sydney and has been using Dragon since 1993 in his practice. He uses Dragon speech recognition on a daily basis to manage his work. He makes full use of Dragon's advanced voice recognition features to help him be more effective and productive at work.

From the onset of his legal career in 1993, Mr. Robinson found that time was always in short supply. However, the cost and time involved in employing a typist or a personal assistant as he embarked on his career was then prohibitive, and so he decided to search for a productivity tool that could help him save time and money. His quest led him to Nuance's Dragon, which had just had its inaugural launch. Since then, Mr. Robinson and Dragon speech recognition have been inseparable.

He uses Dragon to draw or settle memoranda of advice, pleadings and written submissions for filing in court, as well as for his day-to-day correspondence. He told us, “Dragon voice recognition software is easy, comfortable and entirely natural. It has long allowed flowing dictation to be a reality in the legal profession, and I believe it is simply critical software for Australian lawyers and an absolute must-have for any barrister.”

But it's not just faster document production that brings benefits to legal firms. Mr. Robinson also told us that Dragon helped him save on costs: 'Thanks to Dragon I have never needed to engage a typist or a personal assistant and this has allowed me to save a significant amount of money over the past 28 years,' he explained.
